

The first release of evidence by the city of Lexington in the Steve Nunn case involves his children. The adult daughters of Steve Nunn told police they spent up to two hours talking by phone to him while he sat in the Cosby Cemetery in Hart County after his ex-fiancée had been slain in Lexington. Documents released by Lexington officials yesterday say Nunn told his daughters he was near his parents' graves and had slit his wrists and was going to die, the Lexington Herald-Leader reported. Mary Elizabeth Nunn and Katharine Courtney Nunn told police seven days after Amanda Ross was shot to death that their father "just kept saying he was sorry." They said they didn't discuss Ross' death with him and said he apologized to them for "embarrassing them" in the past. Nunn pleaded guilty to murder in June and was sentenced to life without parole
