

The Glasgow City Council went into closed session last night to discuss future acquisition or sale of real property. When back in open session, no explanation was given for the closed meeting. The council did pass, on first reading, an ordinance pertaining to planning and development. Planning Director, Kevin Myatt, tell WCLU News...

{audio}http://wcluradio.com/newscuts/1009myatt.mp3{/audio}

Another ordinance was also passed, on first reading, pertaining to signs being put up in the community. The ordinance had some amendments proposed by Councilwoman Linda Wells. Mayor Rhonda Trautman explains...

{audio}http://wcluradio.com/newscuts/1009trautman.mp3{/audio}