

After observing the Martin Luther King, Jr. Day on Monday, the first legislative holiday of the season, lawmakers are bank in Frankfort with about a quarter of the session completed. The head of the Kentucky Chamber of Commerce says the business community is watching the General Assembly with a set of priorities in mind. More on the story from Richard Farmer:

{audio}<http://wcluradio.com/newscuts/012214farmer.mp3>{/audio}